9th Plenary Meeting of the Asian Network of Major Cities 21 Adoption of the Tokyo Declaration and Meeting Overview

The Tokyo Declaration of the 9th Plenary Meeting of the Asian Network of Major Cities 21 (ANMC21) was adopted today, ending the two-day conference. Please see the attached Tokyo Declaration.

The features and accomplishments of the Tokyo Plenary Meeting are as follows:

- This was the second time for the plenary meeting to be held in Tokyo; the first meeting was held in Tokyo when the network was established in 2001.
- The accomplishments of the joint projects were confirmed, and it was agreed to strengthen cooperation in the areas of environment and industry.
- Many companies from Tokyo were invited to the Welcome Reception in order to promote economic exchange between Tokyo and Asia.
- The plenary was linked with the Tokyo Industrial Exhibition 2010 to help expand business opportunities for the small- and medium-sized enterprises of Tokyo and the Asian countries.
 - An Asia zone was established for the first time to introduce the industrial products and technologies of companies from Asian countries.
 - Business talks and seminars were held to help Tokyo's small- and medium-sized companies advance into the Asian market.
- It was agreed to start working-level meetings to study the proper form of public-private cooperation and collaboration.
- It has been decided that the next plenary meeting will be hosted by Seoul.
- Tomsk (Russia) attended the plenary as an observer for the first time.
- The ANMC21 Exhibition was held to give the citizens of Tokyo an opportunity to experience the many attractions of Asia.
 - Held from November 6 (Sat.) to 9 (Tues.)

ASIAN NETWORK OF MAJOR CITIES 21 (ANMC 21)

Tokyo Declaration

We, the representatives of Bangkok, Delhi, Hanoi, Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur, Metropolitan Manila, Seoul, Singapore, Taipei, Tokyo, and Yangon, participated in the 9th Plenary Meeting of ANMC21 held in Tokyo from November 8 to 9, 2010. At this start of the tenth year of the ANMC21, we looked back on the initiatives we have taken to date and had open and friendly discussions on the direction that should be taken by our Network from here on.

Upon the close of this meeting, through collective and common understanding achieved in our discussions thus far, we hereby declare the following:

1. Since the establishment of the Network in 2001, we have successfully promoted solidarity and cooperation among the capitals and major cities of Asia, which serve as the powerhouses of this region. We have implemented joint projects to address common challenges facing our cities, and have made steady accomplishments in areas including the development and promotion of a small to medium-sized jet passenger plane, sharing of expertise in crisis management and measures against infectious diseases, and exchanges in sports, culture, and the performing arts. We will work for further prosperity of the Asian region by continuing to implement joint projects.
2. Economic growth and the progression of urbanization in Asia are giving rise to increasingly serious concerns about water quality, air pollution, waste disposal, and other issues related to the urban environment. There are also demands for implementation of environmental measures on a global scale, such as realizing a low-carbon society. Under the awareness that it is the responsibility of cities to take the lead in implementing pioneering initiatives, we will share knowledge and experiences among us, and will aim to become cities in harmony with the environment through cooperation and collaboration over a broad spectrum including private enterprises and the citizenry.

3. The rich potentials of Asia are now flowering, and our region has taken on a significant role in the world economy. To ensure the continuous growth of Asia, it is essential to promote the development of new technologies and bolster cross-border collaboration between private enterprises. We shall deepen economic exchange between the cities through activities of the ANMC21, which will include the provision of opportunities for cities to introduce to each other their industries and technologies.

4. In order to resolve these challenges and achieve sustained prosperity in the Asian region, city exchange should not be limited to only conventional government-to-government programs. Rather, it should also embrace active involvement of a wide-range of entities such as private enterprise and the citizenry. We, the member cities of the ANMC21, will study concrete measures at working-level meetings, promote public-private cooperation, share best practices, and establish multifaceted, cooperative relations in a variety of areas including economy, culture, and development of human resources.

5. The 10th Plenary Meeting of ANMC21 will be held in Seoul at an appropriate date in 2011.
